It's the heavy 500-lb omniscient-sighting rig that sets the tone for the survey's range of otherwise mechanical controls. Using just a few control knobs, whatever the view—angle or height—the rig can spin around and zoom in and out, allowing the surveyor to see in 360 degrees. The direction of travel is set from wheels (top left wheel sets the rotation of omniscient itself; left [topology or top] wheel sets an altitude or zoom range; bottom left can change on the fly), and down into propagation.

But here: The expensive electronic navigation equipment isn't only going to save you time, it's also going to help you define your data more. It's like having your entire equipment set stored on the new 100-MHz disk. And you can't even find a full circle (most wires are grounded).

It also tells you what you're not just and what you're not just (most wires are grounded).

FOUR IS MORE
The new Quattroporte

VILLA FRANCESCHI
The Jewel of Venice

PAST PRIDE

The evocative and seductive A6GCS Berlinetta Pininfarina

The release of the new Maserati Quattroporte marks fifty years exactly since the famous Pininfarina badge first proudly on the side of a Maserati. When thinking of the Pininfarina name, Ferrari is the first thing that comes to mind. But Pininfarina had a relationship with Maserati well before the onset of Ferrari. The last car that Pininfarina designed for Maserati, and sharing many design elements from Maserati's latest creation the Quattroporte, is widely regarded as the most beautiful Maserati ever. That model is the A6GCS Berlinetta Pininfarina.

Designing and building racing cars has always been the driving force of Maserati. The first ever road car that Maserati built was the A61500 of 1946. It was first prototyped in October 1941, and work on the first car did not start until the war had finally come to an end. Unfortunately just a single faded photograph of this prototype with its trademark tail, relatively large whitewall tires and 3 side mirrors remains. It is this very prototype that Sergio Pininfarina drew inspiration from for the 3 side mirrors found on the new Maserati Quattroporte.

The 'A' of its name stood for Alfieri (Maserati), while the '6' represented the number of cylinders in the engine. A total of 60 of the A61500 were produced. It was not long before owners began demanding a little more power, so Maserati turned to the dependable 2-litre engine belonging to the race version A6GCS of which only 16 were produced. The 'G' stood for 'gloria', Italian for 'glory' from which a few of the engine's cylinder blocks were built. The suffix 'CS' represented 'Corsa Sport'.

A new twin overhead cam layout was given to boost power to an amazing 170 bhp and a top speed of 235 km/h. On the track, the A6GCS of 1953 was one of the most successful 2-litre sports cars of all time. 52 examples of this racing model were produced up until 1955.

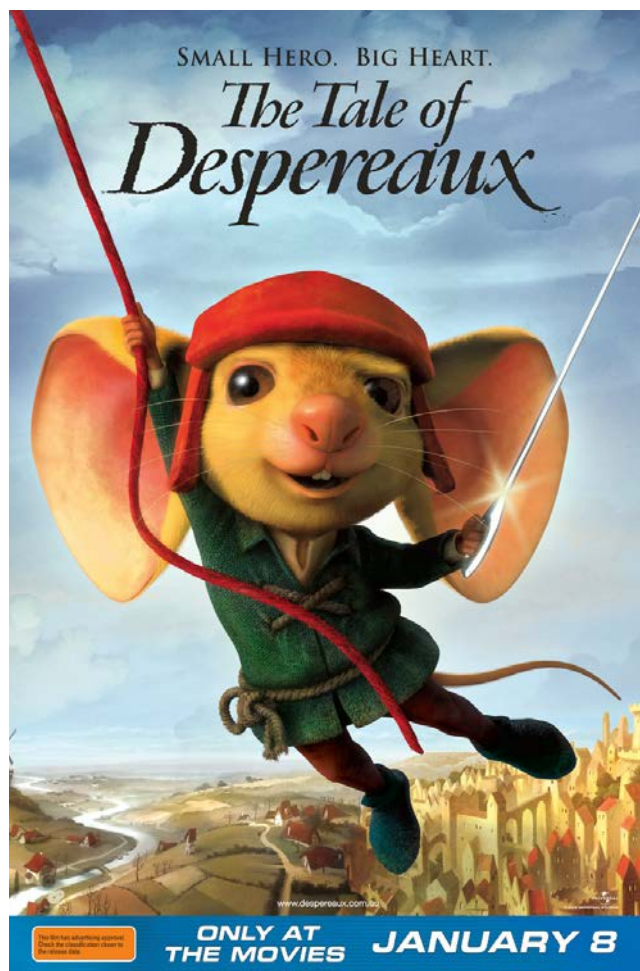

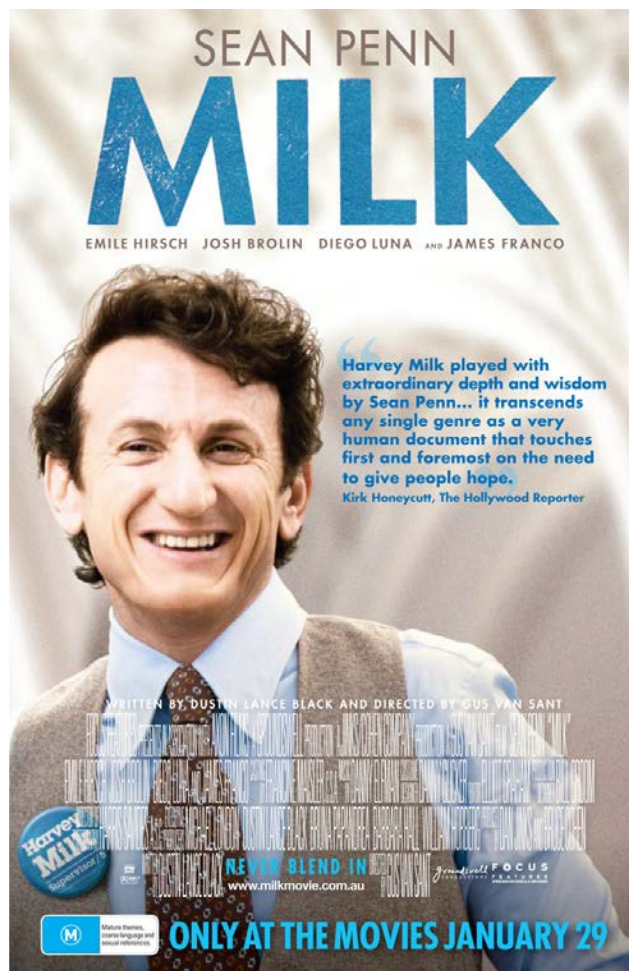

This characteristic sports car was also the basis for what was probably the most thrilling Coupe in Maserati's history: the A6GCS Berlinetta Pininfarina. Just 4 were built between 1954 and 1955, however all owed their existence to Maserati's Roman sales rep, Guglielmo (Mimmo) Dri, who wanted a closed berlinetta for his racing customers that would offer greater protection from bad weather. The car was actually a racing GT, even though it was perfectly suited to road use.

Taking his inspiration from the berline, Pininfarina created a larger, heavier coupe, which thanks to its superb elegance, became an instant Maserati classic. This was also the last of the Trident cars to be designed by Pininfarina.

Small wonder.

Why choose RAMS?

"We've decided to go with RAMS ...here's why."

“My husband and I were looking to refinance and ‘fix up’ our little renovator home. We were not sure whether to completely overhaul the house or knock it down and start again. For this reason I wanted to find a financial institution that could offer flexibility and guidance. We contacted various lenders who were more interested in promoting their latest product rather than the right product for us.

Feeling a little down I decided to try one more time. I contacted RAMS to see if they could help. They referred us to Colin, a RAMS Home Loan Manager, who came to our house to discuss our options. We found him to be informative and encouraging. His guidance helped us enormously in finding a product that has proven to be not only beneficial but also affordable and flexible as well. What I especially liked was his diligence in providing the information to us – and if he didn't know the answer straight away he would find it out. I now affectionately refer to Colin as my ‘financial genie’ because he really made things happen for us.” KAREN & GAVIN, QLD

RAMS HOME LOANS

Tens of thousands of Australians are with RAMS.

Here's why...

For the Self-Employed

"RAMS agreed I shouldn't have to pay a higher home loan interest rate, just because I work for myself."

They offered me the same discounted rate available to everyone else, since I was borrowing more than $100,000. The RAMS Self-Employed (SE) Pro Pack home loan gave me a guaranteed 0.7% p.a. discount off their standard variable rate for the life of the loan. And better still, they understood my business so I didn't have to supply them with endless paperwork.

For the first home buyer

"I wanted to buy my first home but had no deposit."

With RAMS' 100% home loan option I was able to borrow up to 100% of the purchase price so I didn't need a deposit. Saving for a deposit had been tough because I was also paying rent, but RAMS were able to help me buy my first home faster than I ever thought possible. They just made sure I could afford the repayments and that I had funds to cover the transaction costs and the cost of a deposit bond. RAMS made it that easy.

For the first time investor

"I saw the perfect investment property but wasn't sure I could afford it."

RAMS showed me how I could easily afford it with their RAMS Investor Home Loan. It's an interest only loan for the first 10 years* so it keeps my monthly repayments lower for longer. Plus I got a great low rate of just 7.49% p.a. And their lending manager was so quick to respond and really seemed to understand my needs.
